Leaders Develop Healthy Financial Practices

In June, 25 rostered leaders gathered for conversation and self-assessment of their experiences, feelings, knowledge and practices related to money issues.

Using an ELCA program entitled Money Leadership for Pastors, participants learned ways to strengthen personal and congregational stewardship.

Based on scriptural teachings and affirmation of healthy financial practices, Money Leadership focuses on strengthening personal and congregational stewardship.

The program approach suggests that you begin with your own relationship and beliefs about money, connecting money with faith. In addition, it provides sound principles for congregational money management.

Money Leadership was underwritten in part by a grant from the Leadership Development Ministry Team, a team funded by your gifts to synod benevolence. The workshop was also made possible by your gifts through the synod to the ELCA and the unit that developed Money Leadership.

Thanks to you and your gifts, leaders in our congregations have taken important steps in their faith journey and financial planning while nurturing thriving congregations.
